License and Prohibition

From an article on liquor license and prohibition published by the St Paul (Minn) Press we take the following

Drunkenness is a kind of temporary insanity—often a chronic insanity—which unfits men for all the duties of life, and leads to pauperism death, and often to crime Drunkenness, therefore, or intemperance is by all laws human and divine, a moral and social crime. If we are asked what is the potential cause of drunkenness we answer that it is the consequence of many occurring causes but is mainly the offspring of conditions incident to a low stage of moral and social development in which a barbaric animalism or the coarser appetites prevail and that as the physical condition of men improves and civilization and social culture advance these brutalities of a low social condition will disappear The efficient agents in the production of drunkenness are two the man who sells in excess and the man who drinks in excess The liquor traffic per se is not the cause of drunkenness any more than the sale of arsenic or pistols is the cause of suicide but whoever knowingly gives or sells liquor to a man addicted to drunkenness and thus aids in making him drunk is as morally guilty of the crime he aids another to commit as he who knowingly sells arsenic to a man for a suicidal purpose is morally accessory to the crime The man who aids to make another drunk comes therefore as strictly within the legitimate cognizance of the civil authority as the drunken man himself and this is the principle on which the Illinois law is based The State has no more right to prohibit the temperate use of wine than of coffee and consequently it has no more right to prohibit the sale of wine for temperate use than the sale of coffee, but it has a right to prohibit and as far as possible, consistently with the personal right to the temperate use of liquors, to prevent drunkenness and therefore to enact such regulations and restrictions of the liquor traffic as shall deter the vendor from aiding to produce drunkenness This is what the Illinois law aims to do It confines itself strictly within the legitimate sphere of the civil power, and by addressing itself solely to the abuses of the liquor traffic has provided a thousand fold more efficacious preventive of the evils of intemperance than all the prohibitory laws ever devised

President Grant

[From the N Y Herald

Those who have watched the course of President Grant regard him as a patient and much enduring man The important dispatch from Washington printed in another column will go far toward confirming this impression The views therein expressed by the President strengthen the statements we printed the other day as to his attitude in this whole custom house business his resolution to forward the investigation in every way in his power, and to deal promptly and sternly with every one who had brought the least scandal upon his administration Of course, our former dispatch to this effect has been angrily denied by those organs who think that in echoing the gossip from President Grant's kitchen they speak for the President officially Now, we have no quarrel with the members of the President's official family, nor would we throw a single unkind thought into his servant's hall We feel that the President should have justice, and we believe that the more thoroughly he is investigated, the more rigidly his whole life is examined, the more triumphant will be his vindication that he will come from every ordeal unscathed—still retaining the splendor of Donelson and Vicksburg—and that a grateful and generous people will re elect him President of the United States

Thus far his enemies have failed in every attempt to destroy his character He will fight it out on the line he occupies if it takes all summer—and it probably will take all summer and a goodly share of autumn He has made a singularly honest and able administration As the elected chief of the Republican party he has kept every pledge made by his friends with Roman sincerity and firmness The most radical Republican can not quarrel with General Grant Those who were impatient with Mr Lincoln even—such men, let us say, as Wendell Phillips and Benjamin F. Butler—are fully satisfied with Grant The assaults made upon him are only evidences of his strength with the people His enemies have no charges against him but corner grocery and bar room scandal He takes presents, it is said, but no one has heard of a present accepted by him since he entered the White House As a successful General, some of our citizens gave him such a token of their esteem and gratitude as was given to Marlborough and Wellington when they returned from successful wars, such a token as was given to Gen McClellan, who, when he came to live among us, was presented with a house in New York by several leading Democrats He has appointed a few relatives to unimportant offices, but we shall not feel very indignant over this, especially when we remember that not long since Mr Gladstone said in the House of Commons that one reason why an English statesman could afford to hold the exacting office of Prime Minister was that he had an opportunity of doing for his family and friends what other eminent and able men did in private pursuits. Certainly Mr Gladstone's opinion will go far with the most fastidious critics among our journalists and statesmen Beyond this petty tavern gossip nothing is said, and this paucity and monotony of assault form the President's best vindication

On the other hand, in every respect Grant has met the highest expectations of the country He has, as we have said, kept every pledge made as a Republican to the party which nominated him He has made an honest, patient, resolute endeavor to reduce the debt, and although we have not, in all ways, commended Mr Boutwell's methods of managing the Treasury we recognize that the Administration has meant to fund the debt, reduce the interest, and release the people from the burdens of taxation Without absolving the Secretary from any of our criticisms we pass this to the credit of the Administration In the question of our relations with England we have seen the President grapple with the gravest problem in our diplomacy and settle it, and in that alone win for himself an enduring fame In dealing with Spain there has been a patience, a candor, a singlemindedness of purpose which, although at times vexatious to an impatient and impulsive public opinion has kept the peace and not permitted us to drift into a fretful and useless war In the Indian question he has shown humanity and breadth of purpose wonderfully at variance with the savage and blind traditions of former Administrations Every Christian heart in America must throb kindly toward President Grant for his humanity and good temper in dealing with the wayward children of the forest In the Mormon question he has trampled upon an evil as gigantic as that of slavery—upon polygamy—which, as the remaining twin relic of barbarism, has been a scandal to our age And so in every instance of administrative policy. At home and abroad he has preserved the honor of the flag and the purity of the Administration Crime and malfeasance in office have been severely punished, and we have a President who will have no parley with roguery or incapacity in any department of the Government

We have said that President Grant is a patient and much enduring man He has shown this in New York and especially in our custom house matters Men close to him or, at least claiming to represent him have intrigued themselves into positions where, from avarice or an unhealthy yearning for power, they have brought scandal to the Administration This general order business has been no more nor less than a scandal The merchants of New York have been held in terrorem A custom has grown up which is little more than the alliance of a gang of freebooters to stand over every cargo that comes to the port and exact tolls In the olden times bandits were wont to exact what they called 'tolls from honest merchants carrying their goods to London or worthy husbandmen driving their cattle into the low lands This same custom has been permitted in New York We have no doubt that our custom house general order people felt they were doing an honest trade but the country does not so consider it We agree with Gen Grant that the arrangement made by Bixby, by which $5 000 a year were sent to an officer in the War Department as tolls to the Administration was an excusable transaction, and we are glad to know as we have felt all along that he was in no ways responsible for it, and that he will visit the offense if not disproved with severe punishment The story that there are Senators on this committee who will not examine this question thoroughly because it might screen the President at the expense of his military family is astounding. Certainly no such evidence as that sent to us from Washington has been elicited by the committee in their elaborate investigation Let it be brought out at once We can have no trifling no concealment in the matter. The honor of our President is dear to us and it must be protected no matter who suffers

One word to President Grant He is said to meditate a coup d'état in New York politics and among our officials here The country expects this, and no President has more certainly answered the country's expectations He clung to St Domingo until it was feared he had blundered Suddenly he threw the whole matter into the hands of Congress and the people He supported the late collector until his party began to mutiny and although expressing his own personal esteem and confidence in that gentleman, he abandoned him to the wishes of the party In these things he showed consummate statesmanship He believed in St Domingo, he was fond of the late collector, but he permitted no favorite policy and no personal esteem for a man to estrange him from his party and the people Let him take another step and thoroughly revolutionize the whole civil service in New York, punishing the guilty removing the tainted discarding every one whose reputation has been mildewed by the slightest breath of scandal Then he can enter upon the canvass for a nomination and re election confident of a triumph as splendid and decisive as that which came to Washington, Jackson and Lincoln The people are ripe for this, and they expect from one who has been pre-eminently the people's President [Since the above was written the whole civil service in New York has been thoroughly cleaned out and abuses abolished]

Indiscretions of the British Press

[From the New York Evening Mail]

The British newspapers are in the habit of lashing themselves into a ferocious passion whenever a certain line of policy, which they urged upon the royal Government with the utmost energy and vehemence, bears its legitimate fruits and involves the country in trouble and loss of influence Thus in the year 1856 the London Times and nearly every prominent journal in England strongly advocated the acceptance of the Russian proposals and hailed with many expressions of joy and satisfaction the meeting of the Congress of Paris, although there was then good reason to suspect that Napoleon the Third was anxious to form an alliance with Russia, and that for that purpose he would side with that power at the Congress and sacrifice the interests of Great Britain When this became apparent there was an outburst of indignation on the part of the British press and there was numerous calls on the Government to repudiate the whole treaty and recommence the war which of course could not be done after the sad failure of the British part of the military operations in the Crimea

Another case in point is the course the British press pursued in regard to the vexed Schleswig-Holstein question, until the death of King Frederick the Seventh in 1863 The London Times and other influential journals had all along looked upon Denmark as a sort of ward of Great Britain, and cordially defended and encouraged the oppressive policy of the Danish authorities toward the German inhabitants of Schleswig and Holstein When that policy, in 1864, led to the German war against Denmark the British press loudly demanded that the Queen should at once declare war against Prussia and Austria, and threatened that a European coalition would be formed in case the two powers should persist in their [illegible] upon Denmark. The people and Government of Denmark believed in what the British press promised to them, they were rash enough to plunge into a hopeless war against overwhelming odds. The expected British assistance was not [illegible], and the London press submitted very philosophically to the annexation of Schleswig Holstein to Germany

Of like character was the conduct of the British press on the occasion of the [illegible] treaty between France and Egypt in regard to the Suez Canal of the diplomatic negotiations between Prussia and Austria which led to the war of 1866, and in 1870, when Russia, taking advantage of the prostration of France, demanded the abrogation of the onerous clause of the Paris treaty of 1856 On all these occasions the rage of the British press was as easily aroused as it was allayed These frequent exhibitions of temper over annoyances and troubles, in which the English journals themselves have helped to involve their country does certainly not add to their dignity and authority.

Legislative Apportionment

The Salem Mercury realizing that its party needs some sort of defense for its refusal to make a new apportionment at the last session of the Legislature says

> It is now pretended that the Republicans would have a large gain in the Legislature on a new apportionment There is no reason in this assumption Indeed we think there may be a Democratic gain Multnomah, a Republican county will be increased in her delegation, but not so much as the five counties east of the mountains taken collectively Marion a Republican county will be increased, but no more than will Linn a Democratic county Lane and Jackson, both Democratic, will be increased in their representation, with no corresponding certain Republican counties to offset them The remaining counties will balance politically, on making a new apportionment, as far as relative strength of the two parties is concerned There is no ground for Radical noise on this question

If the Mercury has given this subject any examination, it does not expect that any one else who has examined it will credit its statements It is said by that paper that Multnomah will not be increased in her delegation, under a new apportionment so much as the five counties east of the mountains taken collectively Let us see The five counties east of the mountains have, as shown by the last census, a population of 13 032 They have fourteen members in the Legislature Multnomah county has a population of 11,510, and has six members The counties east of the mountains have one member for 931 inhabitants Multnomah has one member for 1,920 inhabitants Under this state of facts it takes a good deal of "cheek" to assert as the Mercury does that under a new apportionment the delegation from Multnomah will not be increased so much as that of the eastern counties

The Mercury next compares Marion and Linn, and says that the former will gain no more than the latter under a new apportionment We should like to know why, when the former has 1,248 inhabitants more than the latter?

Neither Lane nor Jackson will obtain any proportionate increase under a new apportionment Lane has 6,426 inhabitants and five members Jackson has 4,778 inhabitants and four members. Both have now a greater proportional representation than any Republican county in the State. Josephine, a Democratic county, has two members, and but 1,204 inhabitants That is, in Josephine county 602 inhabitants send a Democratic member to the Legislature, while in Multnomah county it takes 1,920 inhabitants to send a Republican member to that body

The official census, certified to by the United States Marshal, was in the hands of the State administration for weeks before the adjournment of the Legislature at its last session, and every effort was made by the Republican members to get a new and fair apportionment But the Democratic majority refused, and had the unblushing effrontery to declare that they did not intend to make a new apportionment till after they had elected another Senator of the United States. Then they would be ready. This is the utterly unscrupulous party now in power in Oregon.

Not a few persons think there is real danger lest the attack on the school lands of the State may be renewed under one pretense or another by greedy plunderers at the next session of the Legislature A great inroad was made on these lands at the last session, and the people have not forgotten it. It lies with the people to prevent further acts of spoliation, and now is their time to take action. It is greatly to be hoped that neither party will renominate any man or men who have shown themselves wrong on this question. The people should attend to this matter, and we trust they will

Says the New York Times. "For two and a half years preceding July, 1871, New York City afforded as pure a specimen of Democratic rule as could well be found In that time the bonded and floating debt of the city was increased over eighty millions In thirty-five months the Republican National Administration has reduced the debt of the United States over two hundred and eighty millions The Democrats now ask the people to intrust them with the National Government rather than to the party that has produced these results."

The Herald seems to think it something remarkable that Garrett Davis, a Senator of the United States, should have been allowed to declare on the floor of the Senate without a rebuke that President Grant is the "fountain of dishonor, abuse and corruption in our country." Nothing remarkable at all There was no Senator that wished to descend to the blackguard's level, so the invective passed unnoticed Envenomed falsehood often invents calumnies so foul, that they smother in their own grossness.

In the course of a severe arraignment of the Democratic party of this State, the Roseburg Ensign says "Almost every law of the last Legislature is either a scheme for depleting the State Treasury, or to advance a partisan rascality We ask any voter to read the laws of that Legislature and judge for himself Look at the Swamp Land swindle It is not denied that within thirty minutes after its approval by the Governor the members of the ring had their applications on file"

If our neighbor of the Herald will examine the New York Herald of the 21st February he will find dispatches from South Carolina which confirm our statement that the delegates appointed from that State to the Republican National Convention are State not Federal, office-holders Our neighbor made himself singularly ridiculous about this little matter

The Herald don t know how to reply to the fact that salt is cheaper now under protection than it was twelve years ago under comparative free trade Perhaps its next endeavor will be to show that the duty on pig iron seriously diminishes the hog crop of the country

The American Journal of Education, published at St. Louis, has some educational news from "Oregon Territory Can t the Historical Society of Oregon elect this editor and educator to an honorary membership and send him a common school geography?

According to a French statistical magazine the following are the greatest wool producing nations of the earth, and the figures annexed are the production in pounds per year The United States, 177 000 000 England, 159 - 969,000, Australia, 152 500 000 La Plata 138 070 000 The total production of the world is estimated at 1,121 519 000 pounds per annum Assuming the world s cotton production to be six million bales, and the bale to average 490 pounds the whole would sum up 2 940 000 000 pounds against 1 121 519 008 pounds wool

The work of reducing the national debt goes on If there is one thing more than another that should entitle the present administration to the confidence of the people it is the regularly recurring monthly report of the decrease of the public debt During the month of February the debt was decreased $12 000 000 making a total decrease since Grant s term began of $299,253,310

DISTINGUISHING REAL FROM APPARENT DEATH —A new mode of distinguishing between real and apparent death has been recently submitted to the consideration of the Academy of Medicine in Paris It consists in the insertion of a bright steel needle into the body and it is said that when life is present the needle soon becomes tarnished by oxidation while on the other hand, if death has taken place the needle will retain its brightness for half an hour or more According to Dr Laborde, the author of the communication, oxidation with its attendant electrical phenomena indicates that death is only apparent and the entire absence of oxidation is a sign of real death

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN

CALIFORNIA

From San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6 —In reviewing points made by counsel for the defence in the case of Devine alias the Chicken, Judge McKinstry said there might have been some technical illegalities or improprieties in the first action of the police at the time of the arrest of the prisoner but nothing which in the slightest degree prejudiced his case or in any manner justified application for a new trial He overruled exceptions taken consequently, and ordered Devine to stand up At this moment Devine who for the first time since his arrest showed any considerable excitement sprang quickly to his feet and after a number of efforts to clear his throat and steady his voice proceeded to speak over half an hour using most of the time excellent language, making some rather poetical quotations and gesticulating not without considerable oratorical grace with his remaining hand He declared he had been badly used and convicted on false testimony through hatred and prejudice He reiterated the assertion that he never saw the murdered man in his life until he saw him in prison after his arrest and that he was as guiltless of any crime before God or man as the infant reposing on its mother's breast He insisted that the man who was seen in his company by so many persons and who was identified as Kamp was a sailor named Wilson who had asked him to ship him on board a vessel He then went over the entire ground, denying many of the statements of witnesses, and explaining away others, but failing to give any reason whatever for going out to South San Francisco on the day of the murder He said that after his arrest he was placed in a straight jacket, and subsequently kept all night in a dark cell, up to his ankles in water, which is an impossibility, and charged that the police put the case up on him Judge McKinstry at the close of Chicken's remarks said that he had received a fair patient, impartial trial He had been convicted on a very strong, clear and unbroken line of testimony and the jury had no doubt whatever of his being guilty of wilful murder He said that the case would be carried to the Supreme Court, and the day fixed in the sentence might not be the one on which the execution would take place but, in his opinion, it was but a question of time as to the result, which was inevitable, and he would beg him to prepare to meet his doom, and look to a higher source than earthly tribunals for consolation and forgiveness At this point Devine said that before judgment was pronounced, he wanted to say a few words more The case had been put up on him by Captain Douglas of the police, and, he believed, he had bought testimony to hang him He did not think the Court would take any pleasure in sentencing him to death, but supposed it was a matter of duty He wanted to thank his counsel for his efforts in behalf of an innocent and honest man Judge McKinstry said there was nothing to sustain the charge that the police had done more than their duty in hunting up evidence It was their business He hoped the prisoner would dismiss all thoughts of resentment and look to a higher source for peace and pardon. He then sentenced him to be hanged between 9 A M and 5 P. M on Friday, April 26th. The Court-room, which had been densely packed all day, was quickly cleared, and the street around the entrance of the City Hall was crowded in a moment with an eager throng waiting to catch a glimpse of the prisoner as he was taken back to jail On Broadway more than a thousand people were gathered—many of them having waited for hours to see the prisoner pass—and it required a large force of police to clear the way He was placed in a cell by himself in jail Even after he was locked up the crowd lingered until sunset, and even then had not wholly dispersed.

British Opinion

English newspapers are disposed to call the British Cabinet to account for their negligence in accepting the Washington Treaty The London Times of the 5th February says

> There has been a mistake and when this is said all is said, at least so far as regards the international aspect of the misfortune We may justly feel some indignation at the negligence or obtuseness of the Commissioners who have led us into such an unpleasant position, but we will not throw any of the blame on the American Government, and we submit that England is equally free from any share in the fault of the miscarriage We go a little further No man is a good judge in his own cause but we can appeal to every dispassionate and neutral foreigner whether there has been any unseemly vehemence on this side the Atlantic in reference to the probable suspension of proceedings under the treaty Public opinion has made itself felt very clearly, but there has been no outcry against President Grant, his Cabinet, or the American people

The London Standard of February 6th takes the same view

> We may fairly bring our own rulers to account for having so managed the negotiations as to make of the treaty of Washington a nullity for having neglected the interests committed to their charge for having wasted the time and the sympathies of both countries for having increased rather than diminished, by their careless and maladroit management the chances of war and for having brought discredit on that very cause of peace which they professed to be so anxious to serve It would be a failure of justice if we permitted this question to be swallowed up in the larger one which is between England and the United States The Ministry are bound to account for their share in the failure of the Washington Treaty and Parliament will not be doing its duty to the country if it does not exact a strict and stern reckoning from those who have landed us in this latest and most serious of the disasters which have occurred under the Gladstone Administration

An Ex-Millionaire Dies of Starvation

A New York paper of February 1st says

> General William Thompson, quartermaster for General Jackson, formerly a millionaire of New Orleans, died at the Bellevue Hospital yesterday, where he had been taken in a starving condition by the police

The above news which seems incredible must excite a feeling of regret added to utter amazement, among the many residents of Washington who remember General Thompson as a wonderful specimen of old age His well preserved energies of mind and body and a certain venerable grandeur of physique which rendered him noticeable everywhere and the old man eloquent are masters of history pertaining to our own country and Europe during the past sixty years Not a trace of senility marred his memory or bedimmed the power of his firm, black eyes Gen Thompson was for many years an officer and quartermaster under President Jackson A thoroughly patriotic man, and an unusually observant man, was Gen Thompson with a heart open as the day to melting charity He witnessed the review of the troops of Spain by Napoleon I and had seen the crowned heads and great generals of each country of a past generation Gen Thompson was regarded as wealthy and his family among whom were two famously beautiful daughters, received every luxury at his hands Conjecture is defied by the statement of his miserable death That he may, in sudden decadence of mental or physical forces have fallen into fatal sickness among strangers or that he wandered in delirium upon the streets when unprovided with money and died with weakness, are the two most probable surmises How truly said the crazed Ophelia "We know what we are but we know not what we may be

The Germans and the Republican Party

It is flippantly said by the Herald that the Germans are deserting the Republican party The Baltimore Wecker a prominent and very influential German paper, is a better authority Here is what it says

> The political views which the Germans held in the land of their birth and which they brought with them to this country, are identical to those of the Republican party, so that sympathy with the efforts of this great party is natural to the Germans, while opposition to them should be a denial of German ideas and principles The first principle of the Republican party is the unity and indivisibility of the nation This is the "national idea" which the Republican party has defended for years with word and the sword, and the sign by which the party gained its victories The Germans saw and experienced enough of State sovereignty in Germany It has driven thousands of Germans across the ocean Two generations of Germans have, since the war of independence, fought against 'State Rights,' as it is called here, or particularism as they say across the ocean The "national idea" still has many secret foes, and needs to be carefully guarded The time has not yet come in which the party which has been the faithful guardian of national unity may be dismissed from its post

Still Another Remarkable Cure

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 10, 1871.

DR A M LOZYNI & Co —For two years I was afflicted with Rheumatism and tried all the known remedies, but experienced nothing more than a temporary relief, the disease always returning Some months since I concluded to take your Unk Weed Remedy, and the result was a Speedy and Permanent Cure, the Rheumatism being entirely eradicated from the system The UNK is also a Tonic of the very highest order It increases the appetite, and invigorates the body I cheerfully bear testimony to its good effect upon me, and feel sure that it will do all you claim for it.

Very truly yours,

THE SECOND LECTURE OF THE COURSE WILL be delivered by W D HARE Esq on Wednesday Evening, March 13th, 1872,
at 7½ o'clock

SUBJECT—"Ought we to have a National System of Compulsory Education?"

This subject is rapidly assuming great importance in the minds of the people of the United States The sentiment is growing that if we should not longer be content to see ourselves surpassed by the monarchical governments of Europe. Our existence as a nation depends upon popular education and our advancement in national power wisdom and virtue will keep pace with its extension Already has a bill been introduced in Congress looking toward the establishment of a National System and we shall soon find it to be an important element in our politics

MR HARE has devoted considerable study to this subject and his lecture will be a plea for a national law showing the necessity for it in a moral religious and civil point He will show the errors in our present system and prove that we have the power to remedy the defects by Congressional enactment

No one who has the welfare of his country at heart can afford to miss this Lecture It is impossible to overstate its importance Of Mr Hare's ability to treat the subject in its fullness there can be no doubt He is well known in this community as a lawyer of much ability and a direct and agreeable speaker His name is sufficient guarantee that the subject will be presented with all the power which its importance demands mh6dtd

Edwin Forrest

KEAN'S OPINION OF THE GREAT TRAGEDIAN FIFTY YEARS AGO

The Washington Chronicle of a recent date says

During one of Edwin Kean's visits to this country Edwin Forrest then a boy of eighteen or nineteen years was leading man at the Albany New York theater Forrest had never seen the great tragedian and when, therefore it was made known to him that Kean was coming to Albany for a week the young actor trembled at the mere thought of playing with him The play was announced "Othello" Kean as the Moor and Forrest as Iago Mr Forrest called to see Kean on the day previous After some preliminary flourishes Kean said

Young man I m going to do you a great favor Stepping to the table he took an old faded book This is my stage copy of 'Othello' You will find everything marked in it Now good day! but stay what will you drink? Nothing Well I will Please ring that bell Thank you I will see you to night

The theater was more than crowded that night It was literally packed Seats had brought enormous prices at auction, and the house overflowed with humanity Nor was it a quiet audience They yelled howled, fought and even shot at each other but when Kean appeared the tumult was immediately quelled He carried everything before him Forrest never before played better and was frequently encouraged during the evening by Kean, who in stage whisper would say to him "Capital, 'Excellent,' Well done sir! At the close of the third act Kean approached Forrest, and said

Where were you born sir?

In Philadelphia

In Philadelphia—I am going there I will act there, sir I will make your fortune, for you are an actor—a real actor

Kean did go to Philadelphia and while there was given a dinner Kean was, of course, toasted, and after replying in the usual terms said I met a very extraordinary young man in Albany the other day His name is Edwin Forrest He was born in Philadelphia He did Iago to my Othello and made the best Iago I have played with for years I tell you cherish that young man Watch him for he will yet be the greatest actor on the American continent

Forrest shortly after played in Philadelphia This time the seats for his "Othello" were sold by auction, and Kean's prophecy has been fulfilled to the letter

Review of Trumbull's Course

The Chicago Evening Journal of February 24th says editorially

Senator Trumbull sailed into the French Arms debate yesterday without saying anything about the question under discussion, but in order to put in another bid for the "Possum Nomination for President, he endorsed the platform of the Missouri malcontents, and declared for Gratz Brown, and, God helping him, he would contend for them to the end Senator Morton made a palpable hit on our Senator by reminding him that when Breckenridge, Slidell and Toombs went into the rebellion, they stood in the Senate to betray the Government and country, and hoped Senator Trumbull would not stay in the Republican party for a like object Senator Trumbull it appears, has asked for the appointment of one hundred and three individuals under General Grant's Administration and three times that number under President Lincoln This is very uncivil service on the part of that distinguished reformer While such professedly Republican papers as the New York Tribune and Chicago Tribune are petting Senators Summner and Trumbull approvingly on the back for their reckless persistent but impotent assaults on President Grant's Administration, the Democratic National Committee is scattering their printed speeches all over the country under the frank of Democratic Senators and Representatives as campaign documents The big and little Tribunes, the Democrats and the two malcontent Senators mentioned are just now harmoniously co-operating in a common purpose, and that is, to "Kill off Grant" In the same way the same persons and papers tried to "Kill off Lincoln" when the question of his renomination was under consideration They will learn, by and by, that the "killing off business is an unprofitable one

Tenacity of Life

At the unfortunate Red river military campaign, toward the close of the war, a cavalry soldier about twenty years old, in the vigor of health, was thrust clear through the body by a broadsword in the hand of a mounted enemy

The sword entered just in front of the short ribs of the right side and came out opposite, close to the spine, and what was remarkable, he declared he did not feel its entrance, but when the fellow drew it out it gave him some pain

He was considered mortally wounded But neither bleeding or dying as the surgeons expected, he was transported to a hospital in New Orleans, where in a few months he was perfectly well

A question came up in the circle of surgeons how he escaped so miraculously Scientifically considered, the bowels must have been cut through in several places and arterial twigs lacerated by dozens The latest theory was this, viz that neither intestines nor blood vessels were wounded For a wonder, that sharp blade slid through between the tubular coils without injuring any thing but integuments front and rear, and piercing the lumbar muscles When those healed the patient was as good as new That feat repeated ten millions of times might not succeed again

HOW THE WORLD COULD GET ON WITHOUT WOMEN.—An old maid says in a letter to the Revolution, that she feels aggravated when she reflects that if every woman and female child upon the globe should be suddenly stricken from existence, the business of the whole world would go on, to all appearance, pretty much the same as before "There would" she adds "be music and poetry lectures, sermons and theatricals, as now Shirts and coats would be just as well made washed and ironed tables as elegantly laid, steak and coffee as nicely cooked and served" The old maid then gives expression to this startling idea "The disagreeable consideration is that after a few scores of years the race would die out But I candidly assure you that I have doubts even of this! Such vast strides are being made by scientists of our day that, goaded as they would be by so powerful an incentive as the fear of extinction, I am half prepared to believe that some means would be devised by which the race might be perpetuated

To prevent being rejected by a woman, a Michigander vaccinated with a shotgun

Periodic Disorders.

The paroxysmal maladies which are characterized by heat and cold prevail extensively at this season and it is a curious fact that in many parts of the country where they are prevalent other diseases that bear no general resemblance to fever and ague or remittent fever assume a periodic type Thus in many sections infested with chills and fever rheumatism neuralgia hysteria, diarrhœa etc sometimes become intermittent thereby indicating that they have been engendered by the same poisonous exhalations which produce the first named disease

In all these masked cases of ague—for such they are—as well as in the regular intermittents, the most safe and reliable remedy that can be administered is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters Neither quinine nor arsenic are needed Both are in the highest degree dangerous and are sure to leave sad traces of their poisonous action in the system whether they arrest the paroxysms or not In many instances all the so called specifics of the regular materia medica utterly fail to break up fruit out and remittent disorder But the great vegetable Tonic never fails The spasm of the minute blood vessels which causes the chill is the result of nervous weakness produced by the debilitating operation of an unwholesome atmosphere and the tone and vigor given to the nervous system by the Bitters enable it to throw off the disease. The wiser policy, however, is to anticipate attacks of this nature by arousing all the latent energies of the body at the commencement of the moist and chilly season with this incomparable antidote By pursuing this course intermittents remittents, rheumatism colic biliousness, dyspepsia and pulmonary affections may always be prevented

PICKINGS.

The projector of a new paper at Atlanta, Ga., having declared that he will "condemn the wrong and applaud the right," the Era says the task will keep him about as busy as a school boy with a hornet in his trousers.

An editor in Texas alluded to one of the most eminent citizens of his village as a "noble old burgher, proudly loving his native State,"—but his "devil" made it read a "a nobby old burglar prowling around in a naked state."

A Kansas stage driver shot at a man against whom he had a grudge, but missed him and killed a bystander. The man attacked immediately killed the stage driver, so that, while two lives were taken, the man marked out for slaughter escaped unharmed.

"Was your dog fat?" asked a tanner of a countryman who offered a dog's hide for sale. "Oh, yes, so fat he could hardly walk!" replied the countryman. "But," rejoined the tanner, "a fat dog's hide doesn't make the best leather." "Well, neow," retorted the countryman, scratching his head, "he wasn't just so derned fat as you might think."

The wife of an Irish gentleman being suddenly taken ill, the husband ordered a servant to get a horse ready to go for a doctor. By the time, however, that the horse was ready, and a note to the doctor written, the lady had recovered, on which he added the following postscript, and sent the servant off: "My wife having recovered, you need not come."

One of the jury in a recent criminal case in New Orleans was the proprietor of a beer saloon. The counsel in the case was describing to them the character of Ganymede. The saloon keeper was very much interested and listened attentively. His earnest[illegible] prompted the counsel to ask, "Do you understand me?" "O yes," said a juryman, "Ganymede was a sort of beer-jerker."

A notable tragedian being engaged to play Macbeth at a country theater, at the latest moment the man who was to represent the messenger in the fifth scene of the last act fell ill. The prompter, however, was equal to the occasion. He got hold of a "super," an Irishman, whom he drilled to repeat the few ill-omened lines, and instructed him to deliver them. When Macbeth was ready for him, on went the Irishman, and got bravely through this task—

> "As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
> I looked toward Birnam, and, anon, me thought
> The wood began to move.

"Liar! Slave!" cries the great tragedian. Down on his knees dropped the m[illegible]ger, gasping in agony: "On my sowl, sir, that's exactly what the prompter towld me to say."

Nothing is so charming as to see a nice girl, in the coquettish costume of the rinks, with cheeks rosy with excitement, skimming the ice like a bird—and [illegible] down upon a group of gentlemen, and pr[illegible]ding she can't stop herself, and landing in the arms of the very young [illegible] her father don't allow her to [illegible] darting away again and falling on her h[illegible] and exposing herself to remarks about her [illegible].

(Mrs. T. again tries to speak;) "Oh—Oh—"

Mr. T.—I won't have it, madam! And you get under a little precious headway, and then put your feet [illegible] along stooping your head and shoulders [show how] and hold your arms out like you expected a a church was going to fall on you; it aggravat[illegible] the life out of me! And Tuesday, wh[illegible] I was ass enough to get on skates my[illegible] [illegible] and lit on my head and cracked the [illegible] like the sun with all its [illegible] when I struck, and they [illegible] me ninety dollars for ruining the man's p[illegible]d, I was terrified with the conviction that [illegible] I saw the parallels of latitude glim[illegible] all around me; and what was it but you in your awkward [illegible] up over me with your confounded "titters" on! I can't stand [illegible], and I won't.

Mrs. T.—Mr. Twain, I am surp—

Mr. T.—[illegible] I tell you, you shan't bring odium upon the family by your [illegible] to skate, sprawling around with your big feet like a cow ploughing her way down a hill in slippery weather. [Shows how.] Maybe you wouldn't be so [illegible] feet of yours if you knew what occurred when I took your [illegible]

Mrs. T.—What was it? Tell me what it was! Tell me what it was this minute! I just know it's one of your lies!

Mr. T.—Oh! don't mind; it ain't of any [illegible]; go to bed.

Mrs. T.—But it is of consequence. You have got to tell me; you shan't aggravate me in this way; I won't go to bed till I know what it was.

Mr. T.—Oh! it wasn't anything! (Turning away.)

Mrs. T.—Mr. Twain, I know better! You're just doing this to drive me to distraction. What did that shoemaker say about my shoe? What did he do? Quick! (Bristling up to him with clenched hands.)

Mr. T.—Well, if you must know, he he—however, it's no consequence.

Mr. T.—Mr. Twain. (Shaking her fist in his face.)

Mr. T.—Well, he—took it and gazed upon it a long time in silence, and then put his handkerchief to his eyes and burst into tears. (Shows how.)

Mrs. T.—Why, you born fool! Twain, are you going stark, staring mad?

Mr. T.—He just stood there and wept as if his heart would break, poor devil! There, now, let's go to bed.

Mrs. T.—Bed, you lunatic! I'll never close my eyes till I know what that idiot was [illegible] about—and you won't either, I can tell you [illegible]. Come?

Mr. T.—Oh, it don't matter.

Mrs. T.—Mr. Twain, if you say that again, I say I'll make you sorry for it. What was that numbskull crying about?

Mr. T.—W-e-l-l, he

Mrs. T.—W-e-l-l, he. Out with it. Do you want me to—to—Twain! I'll snatch them pet ear-locks off till the side of your [illegible]'s as bald as the top of my hand.

Mr. T.—Well, he—poor fellow—he fairly doted on his grandmother—fairly doted on her. She had nursed him, you know, because his mother was so feeble, and so—well he came to this country some fifteen years ago, and first he set up in the vegetable line, and got along pretty well, and was about to send to England for an old lady, when hard [illegible] come and he got broke. He went into fruit, and after that into milk—into all sorts of things, you know; but he got disappointed every time, till this present business fetched out all right, and he sent right off for the old woman. She landed here four weeks ago, but died the very same night. It was hard, very hard after all his waiting and toiling for fifteen years, to get her over here at last and have her die on his hands. He—he—well, he was disgusted. However he laid her out, and he and his [illegible] set up with her, and by-and-by the memories of her virtues, softened his bitterness and turned it to a [illegible] grief—a settled melancholy that hung about his spirit like a pall for many days. However, by patiently striving to keep sad thoughts out of his mind, he was finally beginning to regain some of his old-time cheerfulness, when your shoe reminded him so painfully of his poor sainted grandmother's coffin—

Mrs. T.—Take that you brute! (Slaps his face.) And if you dare to come back here I'll kick you out again. You degraded old ruffian! Out of the house with you! (Exit, leading Mark out by the year.)

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

WEDNESDAY EVENING, March 6 1872

Gold in New York, 110.

Portland Legal Tender quotations, 90½c buying and 91½c selling.

The duties collected at this port in coin during the months of January and February of this year aggregate $ 1,326 75. Since the commencement of the present fiscal year—from July 1st to the 1st of March—the duties collected aggregate $224,956 59. This amount is exclusive of tonnage tax, hospital dues, steamboat and other fees. The above showing speaks well, and fully establishes a former statement of ours that we would in the next annual return of cities paying large duties take rank above four that outranked us in last year's report. But we should do far better and place our city in the position we should by right occupy, and if direct shipments are made and encouraged, we by the amount of duties collected here, would attract more attention from the commercial and financial centers than by any other course possible to be pursued, and it would greatly facilitate our obtaining appropriations from Congress for facilitating our commercial relations whenever desired.

We are not at all surprised to find that merchants and others in the interior and also in the Puget Sound and Victoria districts mistake the position of our leading mercantile houses. Among the many articles written regarding us, we clip the following from the last number of the Seattle Dispatch, which contains much that can be made profitable to us if acted upon:

It has ever been a matter of surprise to intelligent observers how little the merchants of Portland have contributed to the general prosperity and enterprise of that town in the way of opening new channels of trade or making the most of the advantages ready made to their hands. Contented with the profits they enjoyed as middle men between the merchants of San Francisco and a large portion of their customers, they have never put forth an effort to give their town a leading position as a commercial city. Five or six years ago, over one-third of the trade of San Francisco, which had built up a city of 150,000 inhabitants, passed through Portland, a city of 6,000 inhabitants, and yet Portland had done nothing to establish direct trade with any of the great commercial centers, but was content to act as factor for the more enterprising merchants of San Francisco, who took the lion's share of the profits. We had supposed that the infusion of new blood and new spirit into Oregon, had [illegible] a corresponding enterprise in its business men, but were mistaken.

What is the advantage gained by purchasing in Europe or the Atlantic States, if all such purchases are shipped to San Francisco, there to be reshipped here. San Francisco obtain the credit, we do not, and all the writing that can be done on the subject will not cause those who are not [illegible] interested in said shipments to think other than that our merchants purchase exclusively of San Fr[illegible] importers. Speak as we will, write as we may, mark [illegible] on merchandise sold to lower figures than the same goods are sold in the San Francisco market, yet we [illegible] do away with the prevailing opinion [illegible] that our leading [illegible] buy in San Fr[illegible], and the opinion entertained by interior [illegible] that they can obtain goods at as low rates in San Francisco as supposed to be obtained by our leading merchants. The only way in which to prove to them that nearly all goods sold in this market are either purchased in States or countries manufacturing them is by inaugurating more fully direct shipments. One's patience h[illegible] tried at the grandest methodized display of lethargy on the part of our leading merchants ever known in commercial history. They app[illegible] to labor under the sublime hallucination that others must do the work and they reap largely of the profits. The sooner the spirit of no enterprise is done away with the better. We should unite in a common cause. Put aside all personal feeling, envy and bickerings, and join together in promoting direct shipments and fostering trade.

The steamship Oriflamme arrived this afternoon from San Francisco. She brought a full cargo of general merchandise.

The steamship California, from Sound ports, has not made her appearance at this writing.

The bark H. W. Almy will have cargo on by Friday night. It will [illegible] of 5,000 centals Wheat and 2,500 bbls Flour.

The bark Garibaldi's cargo is coming out in splendid condition.
